25X1A 1. [REDACTED] KIM Il-sŏng flew from Peiping via Najin (130-19, 42-15) to Seoul, where he arrived on [REDACTED]. He toured the city in a Soviet jeep accompanied by NAM Il-u (南一裕), commander of the Kunsan (126-43, 35-49) police, and unidentified officials of the Sixth Office Interior Investigation Section of the State Security Bureau. KIM wore civilian clothes and dark glasses. He instructed local officials to try to obtain the defection of ROK sympathizers, to move industrial equipment, medical supplies, chemicals, and ammunition to North Korea, and to persuade the people of Seoul to move with all their property. KIM stated that he never imagined that Seoul would be so deserted and devastated. North Korean officials said that KIM remained in Peiping after the evacuation of P'yongyang.

25X1A 2. At the birthday dinner of AN Kyu-man (安奎萬), State Security Bureau official, in Seoul on [REDACTED] top level North Korean and Chinese Communist commanders discussed future tactics. The crossing of the Han River for a further offense was anticipated by the Chinese Communist and the majority of the North Korean general staff commanders. A retreat to an undetermined point was advocated by the majority of the Chinese Communist and North Korean line commanders; a violent argument ensued. Twenty-two persons supporting the retreat policy were assassinated on [REDACTED]

25X1A 3. In late [REDACTED] there were 480 North Korean staybehind agents in Seoul, Taejon, Taegu, and other areas of the Republic of Korea (ROK). One billion won for the maintenance of these agents was procured by YUN Chong-sik (尹正植), finance officer of the Seoul People's Committee, largely from foreign funds captured at Inchon. Most of the agents are women, old men, and beggars.

25X1A 4. During [REDACTED] Chinese Communist and North Korean intelligence officers stated that North Korea would have revenge on the ROK by the end of 25X1A [REDACTED] since the outbreak of world War III would occur by then. The North Koreans and Chinese Communists have only 600 planes, which are to be supplemented in the near future by 1,200 planes to be flown by selected Chinese, Japanese, and Korean pilots now in training. The Communist
